6. The United States has experienced many changes starting with the Colonial Period (settlement). People have traveled and settled in different sections (North, South, and West) of the country. The different sections of the country developed their own economic, political, and social interests (Sectionalism).

Explain several sectional differences in the United States. Why did these sectional differences exist? Consider these five topics (states' rights, representation, tariffs, slavery, and industrialism/agrarianism) focusing on the North and the South.
