Mentoring Project Summary:

The mentoring project provided me with experiences vital to my learning experience. It brought to life concepts that can not be fully understood except through hands on experiences. In class we have discussed different subjects such as behavior disorders that we will come in contact with in our classrooms. It is easy to make presumptions about how you as a teacher will deal with students with these disorders. You might have some ideas that would work well in a real classroom environment, however I know that many ideas that I had about subjects such as this changed drastically after conducting my mentoring project. This project was a real “eye-opener” for me, and it caused me to really consider what I was getting my self into by becoming a teacher. Although some of the ideas that I had about teaching were changed though my experience, I thoroughly enjoy the fifteen hours of contact time that I spent with students for this project.
