A review and discussion of the process of peer review as it applies both to merit evaluation and the improvement of teaching. Handouts on theory and general practice as well as examples from our specific experience in the Department of English and Theatre. Emphasis on employing the process at one time for both purposes.

HAL BLYTHE and CHARLIE SWEET, Foundation Professors of English, are the authors of three books on practical teaching tips--IT WORKS FOR ME, IT WORKS FOR ME, TOO, and the forthcoming IT WORKS FOR ME, ONLINE. In addition, they have published numerous pedagogical articles with the most recent (on pop culture in the classroom) appearing in the current issue of the new online journal THE KENTUCKY JOURNAL OF EXCELLENCE IN COLLEGE TEACHING AND LEARNING (their article is shorter than the journal's title). Hal has served many years as director of EKU's faculty mentoring program, the Teaching Consultation Process, and Charlie helped create the Department of English and Theatre's Merit Assessment Committee.

KERSTIN WARNER, Professor of English, is currently the chair of the Merit Assessment Committee for the Department of English and Theatre. A graduate of Vassar College, with an M.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota, where she taught for ten years before coming to EKU. Her books include A JOURNEY WITH JOHN JACOB NILES and THOMAS OTWAY. Her interests in music, dramatic literature, and poetry-- and the ways in which they converge-- are reflected in much of her work, which includes THE NOBLEST FRAILTY OF THE MIND, translations of Moliere, a chamber opera libretto THE HOME with Richard Bromley, and the poetry for "FIVE SONGS' with Richard Bromley. She is also the Chief Reader of GED essays for the state of Kentucky.

PAULA KOPACZ, Foundation Professor of English, teaches courses in Literature and Freshman Composition. She has published articles on early American writers, using collaboration in writing classes, and on grade inflation. She has experienced peer review at other institutions and is currently engaged in the peer review process in the English Department.
